So let your mind mingle in the world of incredible ideas and stay inspired.

The Inspiration Festival will deliver years' worth ideas, insight and inspiration in just one day.

Package with Residential workshop on Transformational Leadership with Aaron Eden, Bogmallo Beach Resort, Goa.

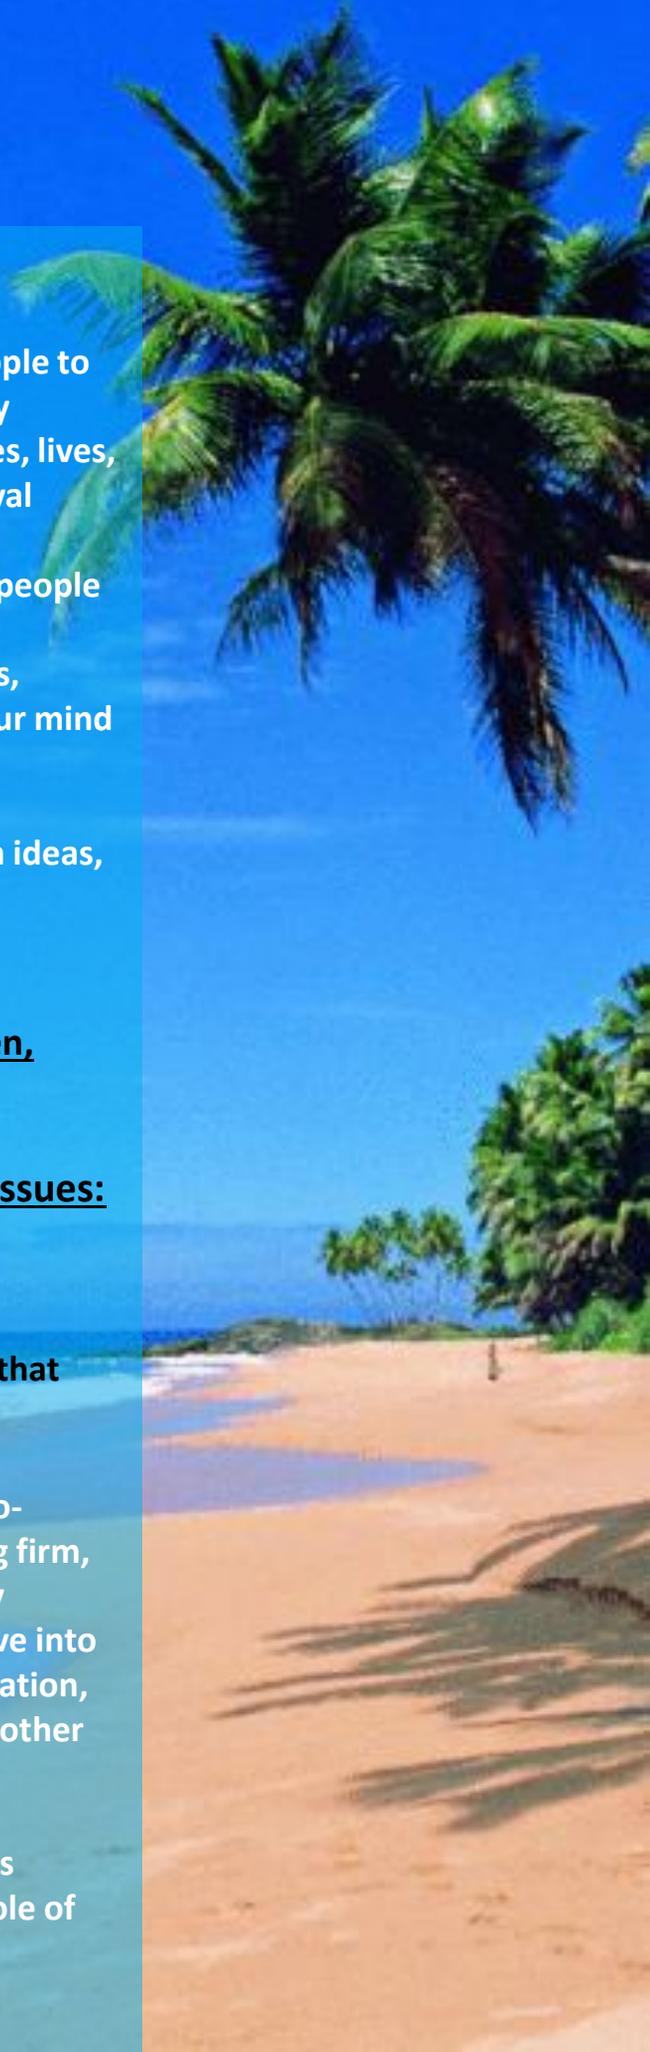

(30th August - 2nd September, 2018)

The workshop will address the following issues:

- What can schools become if they transform?
- What are the necessary conditions for transformation?
- Who must we be as leaders to hold space for that transformation?

Master educator and facilitator Aaron Eden is co-founder of the transformation design consulting firm, Eliad Group. He will lead a one and one half day intensive retreat in which school leaders will dive into these questions, exploring them through co-creation, human centered design, systems mapping, and other generative practices.

Leaders will leave with a clearer sense of what is possible at their schools as well as the critical role of leadership in designing and supporting change.

Sachin Desai,
Founder
University of Life-
School Without Walls

founder of University of life: Imagine a school without walls. Sounds too good to be true. The programme is in sync with an innovative methodology that links school education with real life situations. Sachin says, “ when I was in school I got opportunity to stay with school dropouts and slow learners and realised that India’s huge 70 per cent drop-out rate is because students don’t learn skills, division into curriculum and co-curriculum detaches education from actual life”. University of Life was also recently featured in Amitabh Bachchan’s Show Aaj Ki Raat Hai Zindagi.

S. Gopalan,
Faculty,
J. Krishnamurti’s The Valley
School

S Gopalan: S Gopalan is now 66 years old. A graduate in science and a Chartered Accountant, he was fortunate to come into contact with J Krishnamurti in 1980 and in 1983, at the age of 32, he and his wife moved to The Valley School of Krishnamurti Foundation India as teachers and parents in the school. Having taken a conscious and deliberate decision to move from career in industry to a life in education in the Krishnamurti schools quite early in life, Gopalan can attest to the value and usefulness of livelihood, career, interest, a life of contemplation and inquiry and home being all rolled into one inseparable activity and movement. The synergy that follows from living this way is unimaginable and can only be understood by plunging into it. It is then that you understand Krishnamurti’s oft repeated statement that teaching is the greatest profession and nothing is impossible for the true educator. Such a living is its own reward.

Aaron Eden,
Co-Founder,
Eliad Group, California

Aaron Eden is an internationally renowned educator who sees education as critically important if we are to have a sustainable future. He is based in the USA, but comes to us now directly from education projects in Singapore, Thailand, and China as part of three weeks working in Asia. Aaron's focus is on helping schools transform, as he puts it, from "creating robots", to "augmenting humans." Aaron was recently at the Green School in Bali, where he served as Director of Entrepreneurial and Enterprise Programs. There he helped Green School build programs and partnerships that got students working more in the real world and taking charge of their own learning. Aaron has taught and built programs all through the K-12 space, through to graduate schools in universities, and in the corporate sector.

Manit Jain,
Director,
The Heritage Group of Schools, Delhi NCR

Master's in Education from the Harvard Graduate School of Education. As the Co-founder and Director of The Heritage Group of Schools, Manit championed the cause of experiential learning launching it successfully in the mainstream environment skeptical of this reflective practice. Effectively managed change and brought it to a 'business as usual' position quickly by cascading shared vision within the organization and to the parent community. Continues to advocate and address the need for re-imagining schools anchored to the needs of student success in the 21st century.

An empathetic change-maker with a robust investment of practice and perfection in education, Manit continues to found new ventures like 'I am a Teacher', a Post-graduate diploma in learning and teaching that is changing the paradigm of Teaching in India.
